pretty good game. VoxreD is an interesting platformer fit a somewhat nice minimalistic graphics style. Sadly, thats just about everything good I am able to say.

Why is that?

Because I could not even make it past the first section of the first tutorial level.

Well, maybe I am just bad at this game. But thats my burden to carry.

My problems with this game are as follows:

1. The graphics style is supposed to be minimalistic, but through the implementation of that, it becomes virtually impossible to see what is going on. For a 3D platformer, I am really having problems at measuring distances and the depth of the environment.

2. The game reacts with a delay to any input. Especially to jumping. I never even managed to jump to the first actual platform, not only because a badly translated tutorial text pops up everytime i restart the level (after i died by falling off the platform) and everytime i reacht the exact position wehre i would think it is right to jump from, but also because the jump is delayed or doesnt even happen at all. To me, it seems that is because

a. when your character is falling (even only a bit when decending from one block to another), you cannot jump. At all.

b. when moving in any direction, the jumping is delayed even more.

When combining that whti the level design and the speed you are moving at, the first ever jump in-game is a difficult (almost impossible) thing to do. At least for a tutorial. (!)

3. (This is a minor one, mostly because i did not have an oppportunity to further test it) There is a floating, cubic "bomb" in this first tutorial level. you get warned not to touch it or it will "explode". Well, with me being a human being, of course i tried that out. Results: you loose some health, the "explosion" is merely the "bomb" disapperaing with a short animation. There is no impact there, if i hadnt watched for it, i might not even have realized i had just "exploded" this "bomb". I do not know if thats the case for everything that happens later too (since there seem to be enemies), but i thought i'd just mention it here.

Overall, this game has a lot of potential. But it needs to be polished and balanced first, before i can reccomend it.. This is not fun.

The controls suck because of lack of shadows mean it's just hit and miss.

I find it hard to believe any one would really want to play this.

I strongly suspect that there are lots of fake reviews here.. --DO NOT BUY--

The conceptions are ok, but the platform, the controls are a terrible crap. Highlighting the 3D world and the graphics: you can't see the \u2665\u2665\u2665\u2665 in enemies and the traps beacuse every single little shity pixel is only red and white and the jumping in this freakin 3D world is IMPOSSILBE! You will lost your orientation. And the worst of all there is no updates. --DO NOT BUY--

. It's just straight up a bad game. Delayed controls, floating mines that explode on "impact", annyoiing sound track, the pause menu doesn't work and even more....

Honestly, i dont know how someone could make this game and be proud of it..

off.. Theres a delay in the controls and its just bad.. After 4 mins found myself questioning myself, what is gaming. If you like the color RED this this game is for you!. :(too hard to control and boring. Really bad game. Wasn't worth it even at 90% off.

Cards go pretty cheap though, so I guess you can consider this game if you're looking to craft cheap badges. Boring and Hard game.

A fun little 3D platformer that's a throwback to the past.. harder than dark souls
